Parents may consider themselves to be a primary carer to their child if they provide more care to their child than would be typical of the care provided to a child of the same age without a disability. Primary carers include those who are unpaid for this role and those who receive a pension or benefit for their caring role. The care should be ongoing, or likely to be ongoing, for at least 6 months. Where two people provide shared care (for example both parents), for the purposes of NASS, characteristics are only requested for one of these carers.
